William (Bill) Murphy serves as Senior Vice President of TriState Capital Bank with a focus on cultivating and sustaining banking relationships with middle market businesses throughout Pennsylvania, New Jersey, Delaware, and Maryland.

With over 15 years of banking experience, Bill most recently served as a senior vice president and team leader of a regional banking institution and was responsible for business development, origination, underwriting, closing, and management of a commercial loan portfolio. Prior to that, Bill held similar roles with two (2) start-up banks and served as a consultant within the financial advisory division of one of the nation's most prominent independent municipal finance advisory firms.

Bill is an active member of the community and currently serves on the executive committee, advisory board, and finance committee of the Philadelphia area's oldest independent Catholic grade school. Most recently, he completed his second term as the president of the Charitable Business Network, an organization comprised of local business professionals committed to raise awareness and host fundraising events for families in need of assistance.

Bill earned a bachelor of science in business administration in Finance and minor in Government from Georgetown University and a master of business administration in Finance from the Temple University Fox School of Business.
